INDUSTRIOUS Dogs. - The French Society for the Protection of Animals is divided on the question whether dogs should be made to work or not. The editor of a journal published by this Society considers idleness as injurious to dogs 18 to men, and, as a contrast to what he considers the existence of unemployed dogs, quotes the instance of four honest dogs he had seen at the marble quarries of Bagneres de Bigarre, earning their livelihood by turning an immense wooden wheel, which is the motive power of some machinery used for sawing marble. The eldest of these good dogs and true is Casar le Gris, a brown bull-dog, who carries off his twelve years, seven of which have been spent in his present employment, remarkably well. His master taught him his business by himself turning the wheel on all-fours. Nigret is almost as old as his comrade, and possesses the same estimable qualities. He belongs to the respectable corporation of shepherd dogs. Cæsar le Noir is in the prime of life, and something of a viveur, but a good workman. Faraud, a shepherd's dog of unexceptionally happy disposition, is very intelligent, but has one fault-he " attitudinizes." When spectators are present he is apt to turn the wheel with breathless haste, only to let it rest when left to himself. Each of the comrades works four hours a day on two meals of dog biscuits.

are many women who, especially within the last half-dozen years, while the price of eggs has been so high, make money much faster by tending poultry than by sewing. It is an occupation especially suited to women, because it involves patience and constant details rather than strength. Then, again, the hardest thing for many men to learn, in handling either poultry or bees, is gentleness. How many times we have seen boys, and men with no more sense than boys, jerk hens roughly from their nests, enter the poultry houses abruptly and frighten the occupants till they rush into the furthest corner, and keep the poultry community in constant agitation and distress. But all domestic animals appreciate the manners of women attendants, when they are fortunate enough to be cared for by them. Now there are women gardeners and florists who, by commendable industry and business qualities, have risen to eminence in these callings, and while one of the most successful bee-keepers in the world is a woman, we hope to see others give poultry more attention than it has hitherto received. Aside from profit, the keeping of fine poultry for fancy, is an elegant pastime, very popular with English ladies, and we see no reason why the fashion should not be adopted in this country .-

Poultry World. A HARD YEAR - "Eighteen hundred and starved to death" was the grim name given by old New England farmers to the year 1816-the year without a summer. The winter months were unusually mild; the latter part of March and the first half of April were not unsessonable, but the weather grew colder as April advanced, and ended with snow and ice. In May ice formed half an inch; buds and fruit were frozen, corn killed, and the fields were re-planted again and again. Never was there known such a June. Frost, ice and snow were frequent. In Maine and Vermont anow fell to the depth of several inches -- also in Massachusetts and the interior of New York. On the fifth of July ice was formed throughout New England, New York and some parts of Pennsylvania. August was even more cheurless. With ice formed half an fach in thickness, corn frozen and almost every green thing destroyed, what wonder that the hearts of farmers were heavy, and a gloom spread through the whole country. In September there were two weeks of arm weather, then the season became cold, and in November there was good sleighing. Such, in brief, was the "cold summer of 1816," when the sun's rays seemed to be destrute of all heat.

a member of the American Meteorological Society, who has devoted many years to studying the weather, believes he had found the key to the whole meteorological system of the globe. He is now in Hartford, and the Times of that city tells us that so confident is he of the verification already obtained of the principles which he has finally adopted, that he has accepted from General Myers, Chief of the Signal Bereau at Washington, a proposition to submit this theory to an extraordinary test. He desires Government aid in the prosecution of his work of investigation! and to test the reality of what he believes he has and to test to already discovered, he accepts a proposition to foretell the weather seven days in advance, and he offers to continue this seven-day test for a time long enough to satisfy the Government of the truth of his principles. This is doing much the truth of his principles. This is doing much better than Old Probabilities professes to do, and Mr. Capen should have a chance. His claim may seem proposterous to scientific men, but meteorological is making rapid strides, and if the "clouds that lower on our house" may be foretold by seven hours, why not by seven days !-- intellect in Rassis has of late taken the very desimble turn of promoting public libraries. A requisition to the Commissioners of Primary Instruction in St. Petersburg, in favor of the establishment of such an institution in that city, has met with the bearty concurrence of those functionaries, and permission is now awaited only from the sopreme arbiter. In Moscow, a tempo-rary establishment of a " People's Theatre," with reading-room, gymnastic ground and cheap res-taurant attached, has smet with so marked a secess that efforts are now made to indoce the Russia Raven Duck,
